The space now occupied by the model cares would be sufficient when divided between the land and the patent offices to furnish enough room for several years to come. On the part of the land office objection is made to the removal to the building on G street, as it would only be temporary and would involve a needless ontlay of money as well as danger to the valuable land records. The land office people are in the fight in carnest and they propose to enter upon a campaign of education, and while it may be too late to get letters from people in all parts of the country sent to members of Congress, as it is claimed has been done by the patent office advocates, yet they propose to show that the land office has some rights in the premises.

The assembling here last evening in the First Congregational Church of the great Na-tional Home Missionary Society of the Congregational church attracts attention to the rapid growth of Congregationalism in this city.

Although the establishment of a Congrego

One was there, and he was immediately asked to preach on the following Sunday. He compiled with the request, and then Mr. Hooper went out to find a place to hold the service. By the payment of a small sum he was enabled to engage a little hall and then went to the newspaper offices and inserted notices stating that a Congregational minister would preach in the city on the following Sunday and giving the name of the hall he had engaged. When he went to the hall on Sunday morning he found thirty people present, and having been in doubt as to whether any person would come besides himself and a half dozen friends he was greatly

For several weeks the church depended upon the Christian commission for minister and room to hold its services. In a short time Rev. Cha B Boynton, a Congregational minister, came to Washington to accept a government position and he was asked to take charge of the young church. This he did and then the church people endeavored to find a place in which to hold the meetings regularly, but such a place was difficult to obtain. They worshiped in an old building, now the Police Court, at the corner of 6th. and D streets; later in a little hall on Pennsylvania avenue and after that in the build-ing now known as the Columbia Law building. on 5th street. It was while worshiping here that the members of this church went to several Representatives in Congress and stated that a Congregational minister had never been chosen as chaplain of, the House and asked that their pastor, Dr. Boynton, be selected. IN THE HALL OF REPRESENTATIVES. In response to these requests he was made chaplain, and it was only a little while till some of the most prominent people in the church of the most prominent people in the church called upon the Speaker, Schuyler Colfax, and asked that their church be allowed the use of the hall of the House of Representatives for its regular Sebbath worship. This was also granted, and as a consequence the First Congregational Church of Washington is the only regularly established church to hold services in the established church to hold services in the United States Capitol. Other religious services have been held there, however. Prior to this time the chaplain of the House preached in the hall of the House of Representatives, but to no organized body of people. This church continued to hold its services here during the winter by Royaton drawing large crowds, that ter, Dr. Boynton drawing large crowds, that filled the hall, there being often 4,000 people at these meetings. It was at that time the largest be that many visitors to Washington were drawn there by the novelty of worshiping in a hall of Congress, but Dr. Boynton was an eloquent man and well repaid by his sermons any one who came to hear him. On account of the meetings this church held in the hall of the House of Representatives it came to be called by some and is to the present day occasionally referred to as the Congressional Church.

THE PRESENT SITE. The meeting of the city councils last night In the spring this congregation, thinking that vas one of considerable interest. Some of the holding their services in the Capitol detracted residents of Cameron street petitioned to have from the sacredness of the worship, began to that street repayed from the river to Christ Church. Messrs. G. D. Hopkins, M. Hill and B. B. Smith asked a permit to make a sewer on King street from Patrick street to the from the sacredness of the worship, began to look around for a lot on which to erect a building of their own, and they selected the spot on the corner of 10th and G streets northwest, on which the edifice that still stands was built. This ground was a part of a tract which included the western half of Washington and had been owned and operated as a tobacco plantation by the Van Ness family for seventy-five years. This was the last piece of the tract, so that this church, which was the first in the south to have an anti-slavery government, was the purchaser of the last piece of land in Washington which had been operated by slave labor. The street committee reported in favor of postponing the paving of Washington street from Duke to Wolfe street until a general plan for the improvement of Washington street shall be made ready. It appeared that the owners of 284 feet on that block had asked for the work when the law required 468 feet. The report of the committee was adopted. The appropriation bill having been reported again from the finance committee, with only $12,000 for the public schools instead of $15,000, as estimated for by the school board, the bill was amended and $13,000 appropriated. During the discussion on this subject it was stated that the commissioners of the sinking fund had now $21,000 of corporation stock bought up and that the fund was drawing nearly $3,000 every year from the treasury for interest, and it was suggested by the trustees that this stock should be canceled and the $3,000 used to increase the efficiency of the schools. In October, 1865, the members of this church were moved to feel that it was the duty of the American people to set apart one day in each year for special thanksgiving and prayer on account of the love God had shown in ridding the country of war and in reuniting the people of the whole land. A committee, of which several members are still connected with the church was appropried to Mrs. William R. McKenner, of Petersener. A committee, of which several members are still connected with the church, was appointed to call on President Johnson and request him to inaugurate the plan of setting apart a day in each year as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. This request was complied with and he appointed the last Thursday in December as the day on which the inhabitants of the whole land should render special thanksgiving to God for the prosperity granted and to ask a continuance of all blessings. This was not the first thanksgiving day, for several such days were set apart in the early days of the government, and Mr. Lincoln appointed several thanksgiving days, but it was through the action of this church in sending its committee to the President that the plan of setting apart a special day for thanksgiving in each year was inaugurated.

National Society of Colonial Dames. The National Society of Colonial Dames of the District of Columbia, by Mrs. B. W. Kenna, Countess Esterbazy, Mary Jesup Blair, Elizabeth Byrd Nichols and Elizabeth Amory Ernst, filed a certificate of incorporation yesterday. The objects are literary, mutual improvement, promotion of social intercourse, preservation as to family history of persons who were useful to their country in colonial times, to cacite emulation and patriotic forms of Columbia boys.

The program for today was commenced at 8:30 this morning by devotional services, conducted by the Rev. G. W. Moore, paster of the Lincoln Memorial Church of this city. At a o'clock, after prayer by Dr. Woodbury of New York, the paster of the First Congregational Church, Rev. S. M. Newman, D.D., delivered Church. Rev. S. M. Newman, D.D., delivered an address of welcome to the large gathering. Mr. Nelson Dingley, jr., of Maine, president of the society, followed in an eloquent address of the society, followed in an eloquent address of the society. dress, congratulating the society upon its grow-ing success and predicting an even greater growth in the years to come.

The Rev. Joseph B. Clark of New York city, one of the secretaries of the society, was intro-duced, and read an exceedingly interesting paper upon the extent and growth of the Con-gational church in the south. The growth of Congregationalism in the southern states was very complete paper showing the growth of the Congregational church in the east and west. The growth of the church in these sec-tions of the country was shown to be no less gratifying than its growth in the south. The third paper read was one by the Rev. Wm. Kincaid, also of New York city and also secretary of the society. Mr. Kincaid's paper was entitled "The Problem, Then and Now," and was devoted to a comparison of the work of the society today with that of years ago. One of the most remarkable changes was that today the country churches of the eastern and mid-
